grass has no peer. It affords winter cover for the soil and when" properly man aged during the growing season it continues to protect the land against erosion while furnishing excellent j feed for livestock. Good improved pas: [5 ture] [uncertain] easily produces 200 [pours] [uncertain] of beefsteak per acre,- year after year. The fact that there is no expense in handling this crop since the cattle do the harvesting, only adds to the profit of farmer" and rancher.

In the western great plains, [mor] [uncertain] progressive ranchers are using good grass management.as the basic" [factor:] [uncertain] in range improvement. Grassis big business in that country, for it is the product the rancher markets on the hoof.

To keep his range lands productive, the rancher takes an inventory in the fall after the grass stops growing for the season. He checks the quality and quantity of the plants thus determining how much feed he will have available and how many head of cattle the range will safely carry.

Over-grazing, which has damaged thousands of acres of good grassland in the past, is giving way to better range management, which not only spells greater profits for the rancher but also protects his capital invest- [ment,] [uncertain] his range.
