'STEWARDSHIP' TALK MADE BY PASTOR FOR CHURCH WOMEN

Thirteen members were present at the meeting of the Business Women's Circle of the Presbyterian church Tuesday night and five visitors at which time "Stewardship" was the topic of a talk by the pastor, the Rev. C. P. Owens. Mrs. Albert Thompson is the new chairman for the next two years, and Mrs. John Lingold is the retiring president. Miss Ann Kihlne reported that 22 boxes have been made up by the members and sent to overseas needy people. Three letters of gratitude were read from recipients.

A FAIR BALANCE

Those who believed, following the election, that congress would enthusiastically repeal the Taft-Hartley law in toto and revert to the old Wagner Act, have been disappointed. Too many influential members of both parties have shown themselves to be against giving labor extremists a blank check. The Taft-Hartley act is frequently denounced as a measure which enforces labor. No evidence can be produced to support this. Since it became the law, numerous labor groups have demanded and received wage increases and other benefits. The legitimate bargaining powers of the unions have not been undermined in the slightest. One of the achievements of the act has been to place a curb on labor racketeering, and to give the rank and file of members a much stronger voice in the conduct of the unions which they keep alive with their dues.

The act is not perfect. It undoubtedly can be changed and amended in the light of experience. But that does not disguise the fact that it marks a great step forward in effecting a fair balance between business on the one hand and organized labor on the other.

INFLATION AND THE RULE OF LAW

Thomas I. Parkison.

The president's proposals for control of our inflation have been embodied in a bill now before congress. The question which is presented by this bill is not alone whether the government should take action to control inflation, but also what action should be taken when the type of control congress should enact.

There is scant reference in the pending bill to monetary inflation; that is, the continuing increase in our money supply. The framers of this regulation continue the emphasis of government on inflation of prices and, therefore, their anti-inflationary legislation takes the form of control of prices and allotment of goods in short supply.

There are various ways in which congress could fix prices. It might, for example, fix the price of sugar at five cents per pound. It might provide that the price of sugar shall not exceed 10% more than the price paid for it by the seller. It might provide that the price of sugar shall be "reasonable," or it might provide that the president shall, when he thinks the price of sugar is too high, fix its price in his discretion.

The pending price-fixing bill adopts the last type of congressional action. The bill provides that when the price of a commodity has "risen or threatened to rise to such an extent as to effect significantly the cost of living or the costs of industrial or agricultural production," the president may establish such maximum prices for the commodity as, in his judgment, will be generally fair and equitable.

There is other language in the bill referring to "factors" which the president shall consider in the exercise of this power to fix prices but, on the whole, what congress is asking us to do is to give the president unlimited discretion as to when prices shall be fixed, for what conditions, and at what prices. This is the kind of delegation by congress of wide discretion which has been confined to the past to wartime and has been held unconstitutional and destructive of the rule of law in peacetime.
