GLANCING AROUND,

Everybody is figuring on paying their debts out of the tomato crop, and then comes along the gloomy ge yt who tell us that" for the ck of moisture, there will be no tomato crop. That last prediction would be an awful calamity. Weve been here 30 years through drouths, heat, blizzards, hall, hell and high water, and not one of [thase] [uncertain] 30 years have we failed to have a tomato crop.

Why pick 1049 to eradicate it?

Which reminds us of the fellow over at Crockett who phoned us last

Friday that he had three thousand [pounde] [uncertain] of tomatoes already loaded on truck and wanted to know if a shed was open here, and tf not, did this newspaper know where there was a ahead open.
