The tale of how a rugged [Tenaesspas]
[uncertain] was defeated by Adam [Hunta-] [uncertain] in [campalgn] [uncertain] for a senate seat in 1835, and how the loser became [50] [uncertain] miffed that he proclaimed you can go to hell, Im going to Texas," has been told many times. But not [moch] [uncertain] has been told about Huntsman, whose victory in that campaign was Pyrrhic one, in which the winner [loet] [uncertain]

much more than be gained. [Tt] [uncertain] remained for Edith Gramet Behay of Little Rock to relate something about the victor in that campaign. She Is [algreat] [uncertain] granddaughter of Adam [Huntsman;] [uncertain] her [facta] [uncertain] come from family history. The [uncertain] story are in Texas today, abe says for the word portrait of her ancestor [ahe] [uncertain] has used the enlargement cf portrait by a trarel- Ing artist, painted with bis tora.

Here is Mrs. [Schays] [uncertain] story of Adam Huntaman and circumstances which followed the historic election: Coatly Victory.

Great Grandpa had haughty nose, [froaty] [uncertain] eyes, a fiery temper,
and wooden leg. These made him picturesque enough to be s politician. Bo be ran for the office of senator.

Hla opponent was picturesque, too. He had [bieck] [uncertain] eyes, black hat, and skin turned lesther-brown by the sun and wind. He also had grin which folks [sald esuld iure] [uncertain] any possum down from any tree.

The campaign for [senster] [uncertain]
was not too different from present-day [campaigua.] [uncertain] The names were not the same, but the name-calling was just as furious.

The main save was the rights of the Indian, who was slowly being [pusbed] [uncertain] out of his own country. Since Great Grandpa was a city man, and s lawyer as well, he favored the city viewpoint removal of the tribes to western territories. The other candidate, a hunter and farmer, was more [aympathstic] [uncertain] to the Indian. He understood, without sharing, the [Indians] [uncertain] attachment to the land where bis race had dwelt for centuries. Therefore he said bluntly that the government should stand by its treaty of 1812, and Iet the Indiana stay where they were.

The campaign grew [hegted,] opponent dubbed Great Grandpa that/city feller [ith] [uncertain] the fancy white stock." And no doubt [Greet] [uncertain] Grandpa made much of the fact that the other man, though famous as a woodsman, had Just come home after [gallivanting,] [uncertain] all over the East. There, the [city]' [uncertain] folks had met him with noisy [bands,;] [uncertain] and

entertained him with fine [din-|] ners] [uncertain] and finer speeches. This did), not set so well with the voters, [who};]
[uncertain] were country [pecple,] [uncertain] and proud of it

The campaign reached the [boiling]; point—and [uncertain] bailed over. Some new! [epithet—perhaps] [uncertain] It was Old Timber" [Toes"—so] [uncertain] enraged Great [Grandpa,] [uncertain] that he proposed a duel. Guna were); procured, and mounted with [silver"] [uncertain] plains which bore the names of the duelers.

But Great [Grandpas] [uncertain] opponent did not believe in men settling their [dif-; ferences] [uncertain] with a gun, and ao the [duel,] [uncertain] was called off.

Then, the campaign was over. [But!] [uncertain] in those times, news traveled no [fast-:] [uncertain] er than a man could go, on [horsebeck.] [uncertain] So it probably was some [tims,] [uncertain] before the two men learned how the); election came out. When Crest [Grand-,] [uncertain] pa heard that be had won, be was):

elated. He could not know how costly:/ his victory would be.

He served his term in congress,/ and returned home. Shortly after!

be went on a friends note. [When/] [uncertain] the friend failed in business, Great)

Grandpa, following the custom of those days, made the note good and thereby lost his fortune.

But I think Great Grandpes worst ploc of luck was in winning that election. He must have tried to win other political races but the fact [is}] [uncertain] that he never again held public of-) [fice] [uncertain] in Tennessee, [hig] [uncertain] adopted state./

To be sure, [hea] [uncertain] won the election, but he lost nearly everything elect.

You see, bis honorable opponent, disheartened by losing the election, took himself off to [Texas—and im-] [uncertain] mortality. He died [fightane] [uncertain] in the blaze that was the [Alamo—and~his] [uncertain] name was [David] [uncertain] Crockett
