THE COTTON VOTE.

State Production and Marketing Administration committee apparently was befuddled [orer] [uncertain] the issue farmers voted on Thursday. The [committees] [uncertain] appeared to think the referendum concerned parity percentages and conservation payments only, not federal control of cotton acreage. Typical PMA advice to voters was this comment by an official in east Texas: The election will be [beld] [uncertain] on cotton marketing quotas, not on acreage [aljtmenta."] [uncertain]

State PMA [personne]] [uncertain] and those they inspired ought to bone up on party literature. The national PMA advised that an individual quota is [rencrally] [uncertain] all the production on the farms acreage allotment." The [aljtoment,] [uncertain] then, le the basle for the quota. Obviously, any farmer who voted for the cotton quotas voted directly for acreage [allotroents.] [uncertain]

By voting favorably, [farmera pre] [uncertain] imitated fall federal control of cvt- ion acreage. Once [approved,] [uncertain] the quotas apply to ail producers of the [rop,"] [uncertain] national PMA has stated. So marketing quotas and acreage allot- [ments] [uncertain] hare become the law of the [tand,] [uncertain] with stiff penalties for nonobservance. [Dallas News.] [uncertain] l
