

NAVY STATEMENT ON RESERVE RECALLS

It is also anticipated that by January 1, 1954, it will be necessary to call some officers in the category of reserve officers who have completed their college education since V-J Day and have had no active duty.

The recall of medical and dental officers will be in accordance with the policy promulgated by the Secretary of Defense.

Utilization of Selective Service

The Navy Department does not consider the necessity of recalling reserve officers for active duty since the Organized Reserve personnel in these categories will be largely depleted.

Importance of Reporting New Skills or Specialties

In calling reserves to active duty, their qualifications to fill Navy jobs are the controlling factor. It may well be that an individual has acquired special qualifications as a civilian which might be considered more important to him in civilian employment, but for which the Navy has no need under the conditions prevailing on his recall.

The Navy Department encourages all members of the Reserve to report new skills or specialties acquired while in inactive status and which can be converted to civilian use or job codes for Navy record purposes. Such information is important to maintain the maximum practical extent that members of the Reserve called to active duty are given assignment which utilize their primary skills for which the Navy has need.

Involuntary Duty Is Limited to 21 Months by Present Law

Present law which authorizes the involuntary recall of Reserve personnel specifies that the maximum period of involuntary duty is limited to 21 months. This does not include such personnel from volunteering for additional active duty. Reserve personnel released to inactive duty after completion of 21 months' active duty will be recalled by newly passed legislation to the active status as necessary, by other Reserve personnel who have had no post-war active duty.

Reservists Eligible to Request Delay or Deferral.

The Secretary of Defense has established a policy with regard to delay in calling of Reserve officers by filling key billets in essential industries or positions essential to community welfare. In addition, the Navy Department considers elements of extreme personal hardship as justifying delay or deferral. In this connection the Navy Department is now considering ordering Navy Reserve personnel to active duty on an involuntary basis if they have four or more dependents. Such personnel who had previously been recalled are permitted to request for release or discharge at the option of the individual. The procedures for requesting delay or deferral by an individual member of the Reserve or his employer have been well publicized. Prompt request, addressed to the Commandant of the Naval District or River Command through whom orders to active duty are issued, is necessary.

Major Factors in Determining Recall.

Since the need exists for personnel fully qualified for sea duty, the age of the individual will be a dominant factor in determining whether or not recall orders are issued.

The needs of the fleet for junior line officers will be met by supplying the regular personnel by Reserve officers who have completed their college education since V-J Day and have had no active duty.

Utilization of Selective Service

DECORATIONS AT MAGNOLIA GARDEN CLUB

The holiday decorations were exhibited Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Melton Hickman of Taffin. She had a table of 200 people who gathered at the Day Crockett Memorial building in Crockett to see her talk on Christmas decorations.

The large number of guests who came to hear Mrs. Hickman and to see the decorations for the holiday season. The exhibit featured many color arrangements, featuring not only the traditional red and green theme, but the modernistic trends of decorating with blue and white and silver. The modernistic arrangement drew a hand from all present because it featured peacock feathers and green magnolia leaves, which formed a background for various colored balls which were placed at the base of the arrangement. Another popular display was an arrangement of water lilies, cat-tails and ligustrum leaves, and berries, all of which, she told the audience, had been sprayed with the silver paint to make a lovely centerpiece decoration.

A pleased "hum-m-m" came from the intense listeners in the audience when she said: "And plan to decorate the backdoor as well as the front door." Then she explained that "if your back door is like my back door at home, you will have just as many guests to arrive at the back door as the front." To prove that back door decorations could be clever, she exhibited a red dust pan (with its half cover catch-all top) into which were stuck evergreens and red berries. Another arrangement for the back door was a gilded horse shoe with a bunch of potted with a red ribbon bow.

Her talk was over all too soon, and guests lingered to see the display at closer range and to ask her questions on arrangements. Mrs. Hickman was most gracious in her manner as she talked with many who asked her advice in making the lovely holiday decorations. Mrs. Elwood Dawson, president of the club, thanked all for attending the meeting and especially she commended the Future Homemakers class for attending as a group.

Homes for the Magnolia Garden club entertainment were Mrs. Herbert Callaway and Mrs. Robert von Doenhoff. They invited guests to the table where the table was set from a beautiful table arrangement in which green and red motives of the Christmas holiday season were blended in decorations using red gladioli and pine sprays as center decorations. Flanked by two green candles on each side. The table was most attractive in a cloth of Christmas red.

Mrs. A. S. Brewer and Mrs. Harry McLean decorated the attractive table.

Texas Venture In Education • 1876-1951 Our first college • Texas A. and M. is now in its seventy-fifth year

In recent months much has been written of amazing new developments in the forestry field through the breeding of hybrid trees, producing a fast-growing, vigorous new tree in much the same manner as scientists have produced hybrid corn and other valuable new plants. Success in this field would revolutionize forestry practices. Thirty years ago a hybrid oak tree which is now coming to the attention of the world, Hilge Ness, who produced hybrid oaks by crossing the overcup oak and the live oak, was chief biologist of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and professor of botany at the college for many years. He joined the staff in 1909, after graduating from Texas A. and M., and served until his death in 1928. A distinguished scientist, he had great influence as a teacher and researcher, and made valuable contributions to Texas agriculture through the production of many new plants, one of which was the Nessberry, a cross between the dewberry and raspberry, which still bears his name.

CROCKETT SETS MOOD OF SEASON BY DECORATING

Just two more weeks to go till that great day Christmas; and it is suddenly rushing down upon us as quickly as a Texas norther.

Everywhere you go, the holiday season seems to be the topic of conversation, and the store windows down town have that extra special glamour about them.

Have you seen the blue and silver window at the hardware store on the corner? And the window with a background of red and white and red candles are attractive, too—especially so that the people there had the original idea of going out and cutting these logs to decorate with, so this adds in its way to the charm of the window.

That dazzles the dazzle and dazzle with a display of evening dresses against an attractive background of gay exercise and chaise longue flowers. Another store features a peaceful, quiet home-like scene around a fireplace and this year it is just as attractive as usual. And, always with the Christmas rush of buying, many shoppers will think of "home" with all its memories and meaning as they stop to look at this fireside scene.

A window just a short distance from these two stores has been decorated in a way to delight the children and grown folks, too. It depicts Santa Claus and his helpers in his workshop—and the little fellows are happily busy at work.

The simplicity of the background of a single huge candy cane tied with a large red bow makes an attractive holiday setting for gifts in a hardware store.

A store on the west side has a window that will delight many children. All sorts of lovely toys and games are nice to own are displayed around a home-like fireside scene.

On a corner of east Goliad and Sixth street a store features a lovely, white tree with tiny, glistening balls of every hue and color along with a delicate and lovely robe as a gift item. Space does not permit us mentioning each store, but every store in town has set the mood for holiday buying in their own individual way—and all have that "come buy" appeal, while being decorated beautifully for the Christmas season.

Outlining the lovely court house in the center of the square are Christmas lights of green, red, yellow and blue that complete the picture in the business section of our town today, and that adds that finishing touch to place our town in a festive mood as the gayest and happiest day of the year approaches.

Swedish scientists report that a race of giants is in the offing. They have been experimenting on rabbits and have increased the number of chromosomes in manna, thereby paving the way for fantastic possibilities in humans. Pigs are being experimented on at present. For our money, they can stop right there. Bigger and bigger hams! More and more country sausage!

corner? And the window with a back-ground of yule-logs and red candles are attractive, [too—especially] [uncertain] so that the people there had the original idea of going out and cutting those logs to decorate with, so this adds in its way to the charm of the window.

And down the street there is a store that dazzles the damsels and passers- by with a display of evening dresses against an attractive background of gay [cereise] [uncertain] and chartreuse flowers.

Another store features a peaceful, quiet home-like scene around a fire- place and this year it is just as at- tractive as usual. And, always with the Christmas rush of buying, many shoppers will think of home" with all its memories and meaning as they stop to look at this fireside scene.

A window just a short distance from these two stores has been dec- orated in a way to delight the children and grown folks, too. It depicts Santa Claus and" [tis] [uncertain] helpers in his work [shop—and] [uncertain] the little fellows are hap- pily busy at work.

The simplicity of the background [ofa] [uncertain] single huge candy cane tied with a large red bow makes an attractive holiday setting for gifts in a hard- ware store.

A store on the west side has a window that will delight many children. All sorts of lovely toys that would be nice to own are displayed around a home-like fireside scene.

On a corner of east Goliad and Sixth street a store features a lovely, white tree with tiny, glistening" balls of every hue and color along with a-delicate and lovely robe as a gift item. [Space] [uncertain] does not permit us mentioning each store, but every store in town has set the mood for holiday.-buying in their own individual [way—and] [uncertain] all have that come buy" appeal, while being decorated beautifully for the Christmas season.

Outlining the lovely court house in the center of the square are Christmas lights of green, red, yellow and blue that complete the picture-in the business [séction] [uncertain] of our town today, and that adds that finishing touch to place our town in a festive mood as the gayest and happiest day of the year approaches,

Swedish scientists report that a race of giants is in the offing. They have been experimenting on rabbits and have increased the number of chromosomes in mammals, thereby paving the way for [fahtastic] [uncertain] possibilities in humans, Pigs are being experimented on at present. For our money, they can stop right there. Bigger and bigger hams! More and more country sausage!
