MANNERS IS ALMOST

A DOCUMENT

OF HISTORY

Woman's National News

Next time you say John's knicker because he is helping himself to his food with both hands and he comes back at you with that old chestnut "Fingers were made before forks," you may say well good-humoredly admire him in a few hundred years ago, Januar, using his digits, could have dined with splendor in the court of Louis

XIV. Of course, to be perfectly proper, he would have advanced three fingers distantly to the dish, rather than grabbing a fistful at a time. Only persons went admiring to the table for their favorite morsels.

Gaining custom are the result of the way you live, in a given spot at a given time. They are largely a matter of geography, too. You can usually tell an Englishman, for example, from an American by the way he attacks a piece of pie. Given the choice of spoon or fork, he will use the procedure with the fork. The American will use only the fork.

Nowadays, if someone pours hot coffee or tea from the cup into the saucer to cool it, then proceeds to drink from the saucer, eyebrows are in disapproval. Yet, as Helen Sprinkling, nationally known authoress on the etiquette and art of the table, points out in her book, Setting

Your Table, this custom which seems boorish to us now was perfectly proper in colonial times.

Many American ancestors used teacups without handles, imported from China. With a choice between burning their mouths on hot tea or cooling it in the saucer, they took the more sensible course. When the handle appeared on the teacup, it not only changed the cup, but revolutionized drinking customs among the aristocratic circles of elegant today from action on the part of this government with respect to the Far East in the five years between the end of World War II hostilities and the outbreak of aggression in Korea. The dust which our secretary of state and his advisers said must settle there must have stirred up instead into a Jeonsome cloud.

We have reached a point at which there must be complete frankness on the part of the administration. It is no longer possible for the president's diplomatic advisers to announce as they have done in the past, what our position in the Far East is to be without first consulting all shades of public opinion.

There was no bipartisanship in our Far Eastern policy in the past, but now it is the duty of the president and his associates to obtain complete support above and beyond any form of partisanship. In order to do that we need in the state department, legislative and new brains.

Who can challenge the fact that in the Far East we have made one mistake after another, culminating in the theory that the Chinese Communists would respond to our insistence that we did not want any trouble with them by remaining out of Korea?

The mistakes that have been made are finished business. We need now to set a course that will rectify and erase those errors. United wisdom is needed for such safety. A reorganized state department in the first requirement, teamwork between the president and congress the next—

Houston Chronicle.

His Job.

Sometimes we find ourselves much in the position of the driver who was pointing out the historic spots in Georgia. "Right here," he would say,

"a dozen Confederates captured fifty Yankees." Or, "In that woods over there a handful of Southern soldiers routed a whole company of Federals."

This went on for miles until a lady passenger up front inquired sweetly,

"An engagement in Georgia?"

"Not as long as I'm driving this bus, they didn't," the driver replied.

Who wants to fool all the people all the time? If you fool them all the time, how are you going to enjoy telling them how you fooled them a part of the time?

The man at the top is usually someone who has been going to the bottom of things.

There is one advantage to the moutauche. It holds back the ice while you're drinking.
