The reason is that Texas is considered a

SAME OLD BOAT ROCKER,

It is [safo] [uncertain] to assume the thoughtless person who pulled the emergency cord jon a Katy football train Saturday eve- [ning] [uncertain] meant no harm. He did not know that his horseplay would cause the train to break in two, leaving one passenger critically injured and two others with broken bones, Yet the offender probably was someone old enough to know that pulling an emet- [gency] [uncertain] cord is a serious action, not something to be indulged in as a joke.

Tn recent years there has been en- [tirely] [uncertain] top much rowdyism on special football trains. Often the worst of- fenders have been oldsters rather than students. The heavy drinking and primitive" behavior of some of the old grads give poor examples for the youths on the train. DELUSION,

When the government controls prices, while constantly increasing the supply of money by borrowing from the banks, people are deluded as to the true condition of their own and the nations economy. With the sup- ply of goods limited by defense needs and prices artificially held down by controls, personal savings tend to increase as the supply of money increases, The value of such savings is over-estimated because they are evaluated on the basis of what money seems to be worth in terms of artificial prices resulting from the control program.

DAVY [CROCKETT: TRINITY] [uncertain] COUNTY [SOIL] [uncertain] CONSERVATION

Fort Worth, November [6.—Louis] [uncertain] P.

Merrill, regional head of the Soil [Con-:] [uncertain]

[servation] [uncertain] service, has some [timely:] [uncertain]

suggestions for farmers who are con-[sidering] [uncertain] expansion of their cotton [ac-] [uncertain] [reage] [uncertain] in 1951. Merrill fears that some; farmers, with the lifting of [govern-] [uncertain]

[ment] [uncertain] cotton" restrictions, may undo much of the good conservation work they have accomplished unless they choose their cotton land wisely and take steps to protect it.

Here are Merrills recommendations for the farmer planning to increase his cotton acreage:

1, Put cotton only on land that is

Suited to cotton. Cotton land should be productive enough for a profitable yield and not easily eroded.

2. Plant legumes or other winter cover as quickly as possible on land to be planted to cotton in 1951. Such crops prevent erosion and step up cotton yields from 25 to 100 per cent. [A] [uncertain] Increased per acre yields can meet national cotton needs- without expand-f ing planting to unsafe land, Merrill points out.

3. Keep cotton off land where cots ton root rot is common.

4. Think it over before plowing up good stands of grass. Farmers often net more from grass than from cotton, especially when they make full use of opportunities for grazing and seed harvesting.

In most cream, information on land suited to cotton is available, Merrill said. Landowners can make use of the help that soil [congervation] [uncertain] dis- [tricts] [uncertain] can give them in deciding" what Jand can produce cotton profitably and without damage. In the Plains areas of

Crockett Courier — November 9, 1950

Texas and Oklahoma, nearly

5,000,000 acres of land now being cultivated are too shallow or unstable for cotton, a crop offering almost no resistance to the forces of erosion.

Legumes and other winter cover, planted immediately, would be worked into the soil next spring. These crops improve the soil, protect it against erosion during a danger period and offer winter grazing in addition to increasing the yields of the cotton crop that follows, Merrill said.

It is seldom wise to follow cotton with another crop of cotton, Merrill pointed out. However, when it is done, a legume cover between crops of cotton will help to control erosion, increase productivity and reduce cotton root have been getting more grass-conscious in recent years, it is done, regional director said. More than 250,000 acres have been put in native grasses alone in Oklahoma and Texas during the last two years and still additional acreage in introduce a grasses. On nearly all of this grass for livestock is the safest and the most profitable use, and to plow up such plantings with the questionable prospect of a high cotton yield would be poor business, Merrill added.

Merrill also urges that farmers keep in mind the other practices that are useful in conservation farming. Stubble mulching, contour cultivation and terracing help conserve moisture and prevent erosion. Soil conservation districts can help farmers needing assistance in making decisions on what lands to plant to cotton and on how to use these lands advantage, Merrill said.
