WHERE ARE WE GOING?

Present practices and tendencies [in]] [uncertain] our [natjonal] [uncertain] life frighten every thoughtful student of economics, [of]] [uncertain] government and of history.

Roughly, one-third of our income goes for taxes and proposals now being suggested and recommended, if adopted, call for a substantial increase in the tax burden which is too heavy as it is.

All of these proposals, like other proposals of a similar nature heretofore adopted, are being sold" to the public as a free service by a great, wealthy and indulgent government which can get money from somebody else when, as a matter of fact, the costs of the present so-called free benefits are being collected, directly and indirectly, from all of [us—the] [uncertain] a whole public. To put it bluntly, [all]] [uncertain] of us are-paying for what [our-execu-| tive] [uncertain] and legislative representatives tn government blithely tell us are gifts.
