EMBARRASSING

The committee in charge of the Fort Jackson-Jackson Day dinner, which Texas Democrats are to raise a national campaign fund is embarrassed. After thousands of invitations were sent out, finding their recipients to be in the $25 for a dinner ticket, it was discovered that some of the "dinner" had been inadvertently sent to negro Democrats, how many apparently nobody knows.

The decision of the committee in handling the situation should be interesting to National Chairman Boyle, who is one of the staunch adherents of the FEPC, along with the committee. Mr. Truman. "There will be no negroes at the dinner," was the ruling announced by Tom Miller, former Austin mayor and one of the wildest New Dealers and Fair Dealers in the state. "We are not accepting money from negroes. If they expect a ticket and we are trying to send tickets to negroes." The situation, he said, is "unfortunate," but he stood out on the decision to make it a "white man's affair."

In other words, Miller is glad to have the negro vote for his party, but he doesn't want them at the Democratic dinner.—Hidalgo County News.

At a testimonial dinner in New York several years ago, speakers praised a great industrialist who had come to America from Scotland and made a success without an education. "What might this man have been if he had been educated?" asked one speaker. "When the great man responded, he said that when he was 15 years old, he was an assistant sexton in a cemetery. The sexton died and the church elders would not give him the job because he could not read Latin inscriptions on the tombstones, so he came to America and started a bicycle shop which grew into an automobile factory. "If I had been educated," he said, "I would now be the sexton of a cemetery in Scotland. College education is fine if mixed with a lot of work and pluck. But business men are a little tired of bachelors of arts who can't spell and doctors of philosophy who don't know the multiplication table."

Nothing new was developed in Mr. Truman's speeches and the country learned nothing about his or his policies it didn't know already. His glowing prediction that the income of the average American will be doubled in the next ten years, to the extent that it was not pure guess, is recognizable as the claim of Leon Keyserling, for his own particular scheme of a managed economy, which congress has no present intention of enacting into law. While en route on his tour, Mr. Truman elevated Mr. Keyserling to the chairmanship of the President's Board of Economic Advisors.—Southern Weekly.

day, had the facts of the Truman Fair Deal program lighted out on the line for all to see. There has rarely been a more realistic and therefore devastating analysis of how Fair Deal deficit spending is inevitably the road to a socialist state.

VICTIMS APPROACH BEATEN

Defeat of the Truman administration's effort to make the Fair Employment Practices bill the unfinished business of the senate was a real accomplishment.

Regulation of the principle involved in the measure itself, and it was thoroughly the senate beat back a thoroughly vicious and dictatorial approach toward a most controversial question.

None of the "force" bills, of which F. E. C. is one only, should be imposed upon the states by congressional fiat. There is a constitutional process for the development of such changes in our federal government. The constitution provides for amendments. No matter imposing the will of the federal authority upon the will of the states should be adopted by any other process than amending the original charter of government for this country.

Whenever both houses of congress by a two-thirds majority approve a constitutional amendment and the decision is in turn ratified by the legislatures of two-thirds of the states, it must be granted that the majority has spoken in the way provided in the basic law.

When congress, under the lash of organized minorities, proceeds to alter the fundamental law by a mere majority, regardless of the number voting, then the matters specifically referred to the states have been taken away from them by force and violence, not by due process.

That is the issue involved in all of the so-called "civil rights" grants. None of the states—North, South, East or West—should be the victim of a political quack-war for the negro vote. The South should not have its freedom of action curtailed because the Truman Democrats and the Republicans wish to cater to minority elements in industrial centers.—Houston Chronicle.

FEDERAL PAYROLL EXCISE TAX AND FAIR EMPLOYMENT

Washington, D. C., May 19, 1950.

Editor Courier: Some time ago I mentioned in this column some of the provisions being considered by the House Ways and Means committee to be included in the bill proposing Excise Tax reduction. The committee has been holding almost daily meetings for several weeks past, and it is now in the consideration of the contents of the bill. It is not expected to be completed until some time in June. Generally speaking, however, committee action to date indicates it will report out a bill reducing current excise taxes about $1 billion per year. One interesting feature is a provision to apply the withholding principle to dividends received by corporate stockholders. It is estimated that nearly $14 billion is lost per year because some stockholders fail to make proper return on the dividends received. It is not known at this time what fraction the committee will take on this proposition or just exactly how it will operate if adopted.

As reported last week, the house adopted two major economic amendments before it finally passed the appropriations bill for the next fiscal year. It was estimated that the application, if agreed to by the senate, would reduce the federal civilian payroll by 150 to 200 thousand persons. Since those estimates were made, they have been revised by government departments affected. They estimate the reduction will be closer to 250 thousand persons. A great deal has been said and written by the departmental representatives here in Washington to make it appear that such reductions in personnel will have an adverse effect on essential governmental functions. That such will be the case is doubted by other sources.

The senate committee on appropriations has agreed to hold extensive hearings on the subject of reducing the number of federal employees before reporting out its version of the bill. No doubt more accurate information will be available when those hearings have been completed. It will likely be late in June before we can know much more about the effect of the house action. In my judgment, the amendments are a long overdue step in the right direction.

The senate has been engaged in what has turned out to be an annual repetition, another filibuster against FEPC, one of the most controversial features of the Truman Civil Rights program. On Wednesday, a "cloture" vote was taken on the "cloture" at 1 p. m. today, May 10. Under the rules of the senate, a constitutional two-thirds majority of 64 favorable votes is required before debate can be halted. There were only 41 votes to stop debate. Therefore, the "cloture" was not applied and those in the senate who oppose FEPC can continue their filibuster. It is expected that some decision will be made this week-end by the administration on whether to continue its efforts to pass FEPC this session of congress. It is my belief that it will not be passed.

Your Congressman, Tom Pickett.

Some time ago I mentioned in this [fcolumn—some-of:
the-provisions—being] [uncertain]

considered by the House Ways and Means committee to be included in the bill proposing Excise Tax reduc- [tions.] [uncertain] The committee has been holding almost daily meetings for, [sev=] [uncertain] [eral] [uncertain] weeks and has not yet finished its consideration of the contents of the bill. It is not expected to be completed until some time in June.

Generally speaking, however, committee action to date indicates it will report out a bill reducing current ex-.

[cise] [uncertain] levies about $1 billion
per year,

One interesting feature is a provision to apply the withholding principle to dividends received by corporate stockholders. It is estimated that nearly $1% billion is lost per year because some stockholders fail to make proper return on the dividends received. It is not known at this time what final action the [committeewill] [uncertain] take on that proposition or just exactly-how-it-will operate if adopted.

As reported last week, the house [Jadopted] [uncertain] two major economy amend- [ments] [uncertain] before it finally passed the ap[propriations] [uncertain] bill for the next fiscal year it was estimated that the house cacti senate, would reduce the federal-civilian pay- [Jroll] [uncertain] by 150 to 200 thousand persons. [Since] [uncertain] those estimates were made, they have been revised by government departments affected. [They"] [uncertain] estimate the reduction will be closer to 250 thousand persons, A great deal is being said gand written by the de- [partmental] [uncertain] representatives here in Washington to make it appear that such reductions in personnel will have an adverse effect on essential govern- mental functions. That such will be the case is doubted by other sources.

The senate committee on appropriations has agreed to hold extensive hearings on the subject of reducing the number of federal employees be- fore reporting out its version of the bill, No doubt more accurate infor- [mation] [uncertain] will be available when those hearings have been completed. It will likely be late in June before we can know [niuch] [uncertain] more-about the effect
