These direct taxes, [nioreover,] [uncertain] do not include hidden taxes. These are slapped on everything he buys, from bread to brocade. And he mustn't forget the luxury taxes those on the cigarettes in his coat pocket, on the camera and film he uses to take bapypieture-vith and on the tickets that got him into the show last night and on the gasoline that took him to the show. The taxpayer right here in [Dallas—just] [uncertain] as he is everywhere else" in the [land—is"] [uncertain] fortunate if he really can claim as his very own 45c out of every dollar he makes.

This increasing and intolerable pressure sooner or later is going to bludgeon the public into repudiating the lavish luxury of our Foolish Deal government in Washington and all other governmental extravagances from Podunk Center to the state capital. No-one is more concerned over this inevitable turf than commercial, agricultural workers are. For a Tong time they've known of- the.
