TEXAS INDUSTRIAL WEEK

Austin, February 28, 1950.
Manufacturing in one of the bane and most rapidly expanding sources of creative wealth in Texas, and as [aA] [uncertain] much as materially improving the [economy] [uncertain] well-being of our people. This industrial development of Texas in recent [years] [uncertain] has resulted mainly from a favorable environment toward such growth, an environment which has been reflected in the stability of our government and the under-lying cooperation of our people. The future economic welfare of the public in [the] [uncertain] and the state government in particular maintain an attitude of encouragement toward those who risk their [the] [uncertain] to finance new ventures, thus providing more jobs, more markets and, consequently, improving our standard of living. It is the responsibility of all Texans to cooperate to the end of encouraging the investment of capital to expand, [the] [uncertain] and further develop [the] [uncertain] Our, [uncertain] industrial and commercial plants, and thus help in [the] [uncertain]ing opportunities in Texas for Texas youth as well as our common prosperity. A more thorough [understanding] [uncertain] of the interdependence of the various segments of our economy will assist in maintaining, the cooperation necessary to the continuance of this industrial development of Texas,

It is my desire to promote mutual understanding and unity of action to further the economic advancement of our state, and I believe that this need can best be [emphasized] [uncertain] through the designation of a specific period for that purpose. Therefore I as governor do: [Texas,] [uncertain] hereby designate the period of April [8,] 1950, [uncertain] inclusive [as—the—first—of—] [uncertain] [uncertain] Texas Industrial Week and request that all organizations, groups and individual Texans dedicate that period in recognition of our rapid manufacturing and commercial growth, and in developing that to a depth of understanding which is basic to our continued industrial [growth] [uncertain] and economic expansion as [the] [uncertain] Allan

[JFARM] [uncertain] PROGRAM IN 1950 FACES HARD SLEDDING

Wanhington, February [19.—Tho Jrovormicnts] [uncertain] multi-million dollar [faxinprice_support] [uncertain] program ts bong Jput on a [het] [uncertain] spot by [troublenume] [uncertain] surpluses. Lhe irish) potato--waldh hae [cust] [uncertain] Uncle Sam upward of $600,000,000 dn five years, of price [suports—bas] [uncertain] Jdone much to focus public attention Jon the vast program.

Farm leaders ave fearful that the highly-publicized dumping of spuds and efforts to give away dried [epg] [uncertain] and milk will result in consumer and taxpayer demands that the whole sup- [Port] [uncertain] reprint" he [iinet ahneply? IT] [uncertain] hot abandoned,

These leaders say that without an adequate support [prograin] [uncertain] farmers would engulf the nation.

The potato issue hits the public pocketbook in two ways. It takes tax dollars to buy up and dump unneeded surpluses, In doing this, it holds consumer prices higher than their natural Jelvls,

The big thing that worries farm [leaderg] [uncertain] in and out of the government jx the very strong possibility that there will be additional surplus developments that [WIT ati] [uncertain] up aver whelming public resentment against the farm program,

In the first [plhee,] [uncertain] it is possible that another surplus of potatoes may be grown this year.

Second, the government has accumulated more than $100,000,000 [worth]] [uncertain] of surplus eggs and dried milk, which it is trying to give away for relief use and about $60,000,000 worth of butter. Even larger purchases of dairy products may be necessary this year,"

Third, there is the possibility that the government may have to buy large quantities of pork this year to support hog" prices, This would be taking supplies of, meat away from [consumers--with_th eir—tax—dollara—] [uncertain] at a time when the government is saying the people need more meat.

In the fourth place, there is serious) doubt that production controls on [this]] [uncertain] years crops of cotton, wheat, corn and peanuts will be effective in preventing accumulation of additional [surpluses—which] [uncertain] the government would be obliged under the law to buy and take off the market.

All in all, the government may have" more than [$6,000,000,000_] [uncertain] tied up in surpluses a year from now. Its post-war losses on perishable products may total upwards of $1,000,000,- [000,] [uncertain]

COTTON ACREAGE ALLOTMENT LAW STILL WITH US

Washington, D, [G.,] [uncertain]

[illegible or non-text passage omitted — see scan]

As is nearly always the case, so much has taken place in congress during the past week that very little of it can be referred to in detail in a short report.

Probably the most important legislation acted upon, insofar, as it affects our area, was passage by the senate on Monday, February 27, of, its bill to amend the cotton acreage allotment law for 1950. As has heretofore been mentioned in this column, there [is"] [uncertain] considerable difference in the bill passed by the senate and that passed by the house. You will remember that the house [passed_its] [uncertain] 1 version of the bill" on January [381./ Conferees] [uncertain] of the two houses [held}] [uncertain] their first meeting Friday, March 8, in an effort to resolve those [differ-| ences,] [uncertain] They [reachedno] [uncertain] conclusion and are meeting again at [tho_time] [uncertain] this is written in an effort to arrive at an agreement. Nothing [definite].] [uncertain] can be ascertained at this hour re- [garding] [uncertain] what differences, if any, have been settled nor can it be learned whether there is any [raisonablé] [uncertain] hope of agreement over the week-end. [The:] [uncertain] two bills are similar in some [respects].] [uncertain] and so different in" others [that—to];] [uncertain] comment on what the outcome might be would be pure speculation. At the, same time, to reiterate the [contents]] [uncertain] of the two bills would be [repetitious].] [uncertain] and probably confusing. At all [everits,] [uncertain] it is thought the conferees will [have,] [uncertain] agreed on the contents of the [bill].] [uncertain] to be submitted back to the house and senate by the middle of the, [week] beginning-March-6.—"—] [uncertain] One of the most interesting debates that has taken place on the floor of the house for some time occurred on Friday, March 8, over the [bili] [uncertain]

to provide for the admission of Alaska as

At the outset the sponsors of the Vill expected it to be passed by the [house}] [uncertain] without much opposition. [However,] [uncertain] as the debate progressed a substantial number of members, including your own congressman, made their opposition known. When the vote [wak] [uncertain] taken the bill was passed by aj majority of forty. That is not considered a large margin in view of the fact the house has 485 members.

The senate has [notyetaeted—on_thel.] [uncertain] bill. However, if it does pass such a measure, it will result in the admission of another state to the union the nearest point of which is approximately 700 miles from the nearest point of continental United States. It will be a state approximately five times as large as Texas with a current permanent population of approximately 100,000 people. About two- thirds of the population is Americanborn-White..-In-October 1946 Alaska had 16,884 persons voting in a [geérieral] [uncertain] election in the territory. The new state, if Alaska becomes" [such,] [uncertain] will have two senators, as do all states, and one member of the house, although its [population—including Eskimoes—is] [uncertain] only orfe-seventh of the population of Texas. [Hawaii] [uncertain] is also seeking statehood and that question willlikely-be-submittedto the house before this session of congress ad jounos. [O NUNS] [uncertain]
