TRUMAN TEMPORIZES WITH

The first [Qush] [uncertain] of enthusiasm which the Truman administration had for doing something about corruption in government appears to have faded with the passage of time: The trumpeting over two weeks ago to herald immediate drastic action on the part of the chief [cexecutive] [uncertain] Ras died down.

It has often seemed that the president and his close advisers were not [intereated] [uncertain] in anything more than an internal house cleaning [inewhich] [uncertain] their own friends handled the mops and brooms, It has never been [auggested] [uncertain] that Mr. Truman was giving any consideration to the idea of appointing special prosecutors, with subpoena powers and a grand jury to ferret eat criminality and [rescaiy] [uncertain] in [gevrrameot This] [uncertain] reluctance to do a thorough job may account for the fact that it has been-impvesible for the
