PATERNAL INQUIRY

"Derivative contempt" was the reception by Stephen Hogg in 1947 when the federal government offered the state a subsidy. That must seem odd to many present-day Americans who spend so much time trying to get something out of the federal government. They do not realize, as Governor Hogg did, that anything received from the government comes at an exorbitant price.

In 1892 the great growers of the United States prevailed upon the federal government to grant an outright subsidy to the industry. The Texas prison system then was in the sugar-raising business on a large scale. The following year, the state legislature voted the state authority to ask for the federal bounty.

Governor Hogg's message vetoing the bill is well worth reading today: "These bounty laws are governmental crimes, the culmination of paternalistic inquiry."

"Driftwood on a great stream at first seems harmless, let it alone, and in time the river's current becomes changed by it, submerging the country, her dominion and by surrendering part of the control and allowing inspection of one of her most important industries to the federal government, the worst way for invasion and destruction of her independent autonomy. For a mass of postage, secured with the sacrifice of principle, boiled in sin, she would surrender her birthright."

"Spies, informers and irresponsible dupes would swerve and lurk around the farm where the locusts of Egypt."

"Other potent reasons should move the state to refuse this bounty. She is too pauper or mendicant. She is

DON'T BE AN EASY MARK

We are living in an age when the fine art of trying to get something for nothing is being practiced by millions of people. It is the art of the lowliest pick pocket and professional writers of bad checks.

Fred Johnson, vice president of the American Stores of Philadelphia, has compiled information on the growth of the bad check racket. It reads like a fast moving story. For example, he points out that in the trading area of the American Stores a certain group of banks formerly turned back from three to five worthless checks a day. Now they turn back eight each day. The recent crime investigations have caused certain lawless elements to switch their activities to other types of swindling, particularly the pushing of bad checks among merchants, with shopping and counterfeiting money as side lines.

After listing scores of examples of the way merchants and individuals are imposed on and killed by the bad check artists, Mr. Johnson gives some sound advice: "Checks should never be cashed on the basis of casual acquaintance, sympathy, hard luck tales, distressing circumstances, false answers, altered credentials, hate, bluff and bluster, offered dignity, personal relationship, threats to report to the main office, or alleged friendship with an official of the company. Regard instructions to cash checks, regardless of paper itself, as the most important and efficient aspect of the survey."

How important even Dr. Gallup's simple vote theory is a response of 140,000,000 Americans who have voted above 60,000 may be open to debate.

The independent voter is the thinking voter. But there is a tendency among political observers to believe that there are too few thinking voters. The candidate sets his sights for the easily swayed rather than for the minority who must be convinced.

Yet there is a growing sentiment against the narrowness of the vote presented to the American voter even under the serviceable two-party system which has done perhaps as much as anything else to preserve the republic. How many voters would have approved the selection of Harry Truman for president had they known in 1944 that they were really voting him in that office? Most of the nominees know that the voters are heavy that Roosevelt could not survive a full term. The public not only did not know, but it was assured time and again that a dying man was in perfect health.

The case of a remarkable movement to put Douglas MacArthur in nomination in every state without party affiliation may inaugurate an experiment in the future. It is a student of the state like Texas it will also be interesting to note what will happen if the Democrats renominate Truman and the Republicans nominate Eisenhower. The Kilgore study suggests that there might be another 1922—Dallas News.

Hit the Varmint.
A mountain lion, seeing his first motorcade, roared along the road, raised his rifle and banged away.
"Did you get the varmint?" asked his wife.
"Hit it but didn't kill it," came the reply. "It can still hear it growling!" But I sure made it turn that poor man loose!"

The famed David Crockett Oak, under which David Crockett, the patriot, is said to have slept.

PLANS GOING FORWARD FOR BLOOD BANK

By H. B. Milburn.

Staley Sims, county Red Cross committee chairman for the drive for blood donors, has called a meeting of local participants for January 22. Mrs. Mary Mathis, field representative for the organization in the Beaumont office, will be here at that time to coordinate the local arrangements with those of the area.

Plans for the Mobile Blood Bank to be here on February 22 are still being carried out. Blood donors have continued to sign up to give a pint of blood for the fighting forces in Europe.

Mr. Sims said: "We expect 250 volunteers as blood donors before the end of January and we are giving this all publicity possible in order to reach our goal."

Doyle Buckley, manager of the Crockett and Houston County Chamber of Commerce, is publicity chairman. Others assisting on this committee are H. B. Milburn, station KITY; A. H. Lister, Grayland Messenger; Walter Morgan; Jeff Davis, Crockett Democrat; Rev. C. P. Owen; Mr. H. B. Milburn, representative for the Crockett Courier; and Jake Capellan.

Mr. Sims elaborated at length with additional information: "When all preliminary work has been done and all requirements met in getting the Mobile Blood Bank, there will be four trips the mobile unit will make here, the first, expected in February, and about every three months thereafter. In order to do this the unit requires that the local county unit have on hand at least 200 volunteer donors to take care of people unable to meet commitments. One hundred and fifty pints of blood is required each trip of the Mobile Blood Bank unit, and it will be necessary to have at least 200 people on the list at all times; in fact, we need considerably over 800 blood donors to take care of blood donors who, because of illness or some other reason, are unable to make their commitment on the day of the mobile unit's arrival in our city."

Robert von Donhoff is chairman to contact various organizations for blood donors. Mrs. E. W. Walden is chairman of the refreshment catering; T. J. Craddock is chairman in charge of providing complimentary automobiles.

The Medical Advisory committee has been organized. The location of the Mobile Blood Bank, which is that city will be announced at a later date.

COLUMNIST IS DUBIOUS ABOUT CLEANUP DRIVE

Fulton Lewis Jr. in Houston Chronicle.

White House aides and their pet news leaks are building up President Truman as a broken-hearted man who is suffering from political betrayal by his friends.

We hear on all sides that Mr. Truman is fighting mad over the betrayal of the misplaced trust he had for some of his ministers, and that he is really getting tough when the occasion demands such as now.

I submit that this is Grade A journalism.

Just think back to a few months ago. Mr. Truman himself served notice on the petty grafters that a little thing called honesty was in vogue. He executed his White House aide, Donald Dawson, for refusing to fire him when Dawson got caught free loading at expensive resort hotels with public money.

Mr. Truman defied E. Merl Young and his wife, who got the famous pastel blue mink coat, Mrs. Young as a White House secretary, perusal, and her husband didn't go broke meddling with RFC loans.

Earlier, Mr. Truman executed his wife's best friend, military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, for accepting free deep freezers from a character who was passing them around for their political impact. There was nothing much he could say about Mrs. Truman, but he did go out of his way to make her feel confident in him.

And even earlier than this gift-taking was the event wherein his White House physician, Maj. Gen. Walter Graham, was found dabbling in the grain market.

So you really can't blame T. Lamar Smith and the other RFC men. Internal Revenue Bureau officials who topped up a little gravy. After all, they can read, and if Mr. Truman says it's all right for his White House staff to accept expensive favors why shouldn't they do the same? It's a natural reaction. If the boss says O. K. that's that.

Howard McGrath nodded his approval. He got his cues from the White House.

It's all right for the president to recover some political ground with a top status appointment for a house cleaning commission. But you'd better keep your eyes peeled for this one too. And if the official who heads it is as sharp politically as he should be, he's going to be a top status holding-the-robe-for-the-president.

The Internal Revenue Bureau scandal has hurt Mr. Truman's administration more than anything else. His political friends know this is to be so.

Thus, the smartest thing he could do politically is to head the house cleaning commission himself. He would then get the public's attention away from the bureau, perhaps in the direction of the War Assets Administration.
