re-election, his promise to his young audience is significant. This is not less than "the grandest, most peaceful times the world has ever seen." Under of course continuous of the Quaker Trail. Of Mr. Truman's two immediate Democratic predecessors, Mr. Wilson, if re-elected, was going to keep us out of war, Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, who hailed "war," was also going to keep us out of war, if re-elected. Mr. Wilson was re-elected into World War I. Mr. Roosevelt into World War II. But presumably a third term Truman will never be leguiped into war. Police actions, of course, don't count—Dallas News.

Fally to Be Wise

Friend Milburn says that an editor must give advice; that it is his business; that he does not have to do anything to be able to give advice; the only trouble is that the people may be too hard-headed to accept it. And that the less he knows the more advice he can give without its being questioned.
