COOK'S FRIENDS MADE HIM

Again referring to Bill Cook's book,

"The Making of a Negro," written by himself, his biography is especially interesting to the Crockett Courier, inasmuch as this editor was born near the Hill. Writing of his boyhood days, Bill Cook, the author, says: "I was born in the Pine Woods of East Texas, thirteen miles east of Henderson, near Lake Pickett, later known as Pine Hill, near the Texas coast line.

I am a free-born Negro, the son of a slave. My father was a blacksmith at Pine Hill, and his shop was located on the main road to Shreveport, La., which was the market place for all that section. I would run out to the road and watch the cotton wagons go by. Some of the mules hitched to the wagons were bells on their harness and as each mule made a steady forward step, the bells would ring in unison, producing the sweetest music

I ever heard." Bill does not tell of Old Ligon, the farm maker, a few miles west of the road from Lake Pickett, where Old Ligon, a popular old-time darkey, maintained a camping place and supplied the campers with target for their sole splendor. The tar would make the wooden spindles slick as glass, but when it wore off, the scratching could be heard for miles.

Neither does he say anything about

Rake Pickett's saloons, where the mothers went with axes and knocked in the whisky barrel heads because of the saloons were broken up with the axes, and the saloons not out of business by the women of the town. The Croquet Courier was then a small boy, but the story gave the people some thing to talk about.

Bill Cook says he earned his first money picking cotton on Mr. Arthur Buckner's plantation. The Croquet editor well remembers Mr. Buckner, who also owned a store, a cotton gin and a sawmill, and was one of the big operators of that day, as well as a fine citizen. Cook's mother was employed as cook in the Henderson Hill home. Mr. Hill was also a merchant and large farm operator.

Other Rake Pickett citizens remembered by the Croquet editor, then a small boy, written of by the author was Dr. J. J. Howard, father of Hedy

Howard, later of Huntsville. The fact that Cook's book doesn't tell of,

but he gives the names of a dozen large farmers there who were his friends.

LET EVERYBODY VOTE HIS OWN WAY.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Some of the commentators have written that they don't expect General

Eisenhower and Governor Stevenson to differ greatly on many of the campaign issues. This belief is predicted on the theory that both are by nature moderate, middle-of-the-road men who will shy away from both the right and the left.

That conclusion is based on the assumption that both candidates have said that they mean to make a top issue out of foreign policy so they must believe that they have a real cleavage of opinion when it comes to that all-important matter.

But it is a certainty, regardless of how much or little Eisenhower and Stevenson agree or disagree, that the Republicans will hit very hard on two issues. One is that 20 years is more than enough time for one party to hold power—that it must be turned off of office lock, stock and barrel if the government is to be cleansed of corruption and deadwood.

The other is that Governor Stevenson is a "helpless captive of the machine," and that he is a "hand-picked candidate" of the "machine."

There are very difficult charges to effectively answer, and Governor Stevenson obviously knows that. In his acceptance speech he made a point of saying that the Democrats must not try to excuse or belittle corruption and wrongdoing, but must thoroughly clean house themselves. He also said, in effect, that it is not his fault that the machine is so bad.

It is a fact that it is not his fault that the machine is so bad.
