ADEQUATE SUPPLY [NITROGEN IN] [uncertain] SOIL [ESSENTIAL] [uncertain]

It has been established that ade-; [quate] [uncertain] supplies ef nitrogen [muat] [uncertain] be [tio] [uncertain] available in the [soi]) [uncertain] before maximum) crop yield can be produced, [Accord:] [uncertain] ing to M. K. Thornton, extension agricultural chemist of Texas A. M. [1] [uncertain] College, much of the available pol nitrogen comes from decaying homes) in the [soll.] [uncertain] And since the humus con-' tent of smile is on the down [erade.] [uncertain] the nitrogen must be supplied if full production e to be obtained.

Thornton [pointa] [uncertain] out that it is usual ly not advisable to apply all of the needed nitrogen at ane time. Such an application would result in too rapid) early growth and hot permit a [sus-:] [uncertain] trained, steady plant growth which ls), desirable. Therefore the minerals, phosphate and potash, and only part), of the nitrogen should be applied at), e planting time.

The remainder of the nitrogen: [ahould] [uncertain] be applied later as top or aide-dreasing. The timing of such applications [varics] [uncertain] with each crop. With [cotten,] [uncertain] Thornton recommends applying the nitrogen fertilizers when the plant [begina] [uncertain] to [ect] [uncertain] the first bella. This also [epplics] [uncertain] when corn and grain, sorghum plants have from [tix] [uncertain] to [vight] [uncertain] leaves, and just before wheat and oat [planta] [uncertain] begin jointing y Ie says there are four good sources of nitrogen fertilizer. Three are solid, the other a gas. Nitrate of soda, ammonium nitrate and ammonium sul-: [phatecare] [uncertain] the solid and have been used for years with good results. An- pawns [bydrous] [uncertain] ammonia Is the fourth [source.] [uncertain]

Ordinarily, anhydrous ammonia [Is:] [uncertain] marketed as a liquified gas and de-) [livered] [uncertain] in high pressure tanks. At!

[300°] [uncertain] F. this material has a pleasure of about 200 pounds o square inch.

Therefore [apecial] [uncertain] equipment made for handling high pressures and for [prt.] [uncertain]

ting the material into the soil or [wre:] [uncertain]

[rigation] [uncertain] water must be used. [Thorn"] [uncertain] ton [adda] [uncertain] that [carricasnese] [uncertain] in handling this material may result in injury to" the operators.

He reports that results from [the] [uncertain] [nse] [uncertain] of these nitrogen fertilizers will!

be about the same depending upon the, [actus]] [uncertain] amount of nitrogen applied.

However, the use of any of them will result in disappointment when they are applied to smile that are low in minerals [xuch] [uncertain] as potash, phosphate and lime meet Thornton strongly recommends that:

farmers make a study of the evil on their [farma,] [uncertain] adding that soil analy- ais could well be the first step. The polls laboratory operated by the Ag- [ricultural] [uncertain] Extension Service at Col- [lege] [uncertain] Station can [handie] [uncertain] up to 100 poi) samples daily and the [analeis] [uncertain] plus the recommended treatments which are returned tu the farmer from the laburatory should prove valuable to him in planning a [fertilieser] [uncertain] use program.

Compirte details on [huw] [uncertain] to take a [agi]] [uncertain] sample and how it would be packaged [fyr] [uncertain] mailing are available at all county extension offices. Thornton suggests to [farmerea] [uncertain] who err interest- ed in knowing more about [thelr] [uncertain] solve that they visit their local county agent and [scurr] [uncertain] the information on soil testing.
