Parties ordering advertising in printing for societies, churches, committees or organizations of any kind will, in all cases, be held personally responsible for the payment of the bills.

FEDERAL OFFICES AND FEDERAL PAY.

Federal officials are paid according to the best judgment of congress, constitutionally the holder of the purse strings. That puts a severe burden on congress, where its own pay is concerned. The obligation is heavy not to mull the treasury and at the same time not to shortchange themselves.

The McCarran bill (Senate 1653) would raise the present salaries of both congressmen and federal judges. There can be little opposition to the judicial side of the measure, warmly supported by the American Bar Association and the American Judicial Society and endorsed by most of the state bars. Their thinking is succinctly expressed by the current issue of the Journal of the AJS, which remarks editorially:

"In filling judicial offices, the government goes into competition with the members of the bar. The better the salaries attached to these important offices are, the more likely are the best men to be attracted to the judiciary. The only remedy is to raise them."

To that may be said a hearty "Amen."

Similarly congress is in need of higher pay to meet the condition of the higher cost of living. This is actually the ability to buy in terms of a depreciated dollar. In the main, congress is responsible for that, as the dollar reflects government fiscal policy. But if we assume that the

An Honest Night's Sleep

Slim Johnson, just back from a business trip, tells about a hotel he stayed at one night.

"It was late and I went right to the hotel. There was no clerk at the desk, but there was a sign that said: 'Come to the Reg. 63. Take a key. Pay when you leave. Sleep Well.'"

"I pushed the door and it was open. The room was real clean, the bed comfortable, and I slept like a log. Came down in the morning—will be clerk. So I left three dollars at the desk and went on. Can you imagine folks that travel!"

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Who is boss of the executive branch of the government?

The obvious answer, of course, is that the president has the power to appoint and discharge his cabinet members and other top-level appointees. That is theoretically true. But in actual practice, the situation isn't nearly so simple nor clear-cut.

In one of his New York columns under the significant title "The Black List of Victory," Raymond Moley wrote: "A conquering general who turned statesman, the Duke of Wellington, once said that 'nothing except a battle lost can be a battle won.'"

That is a perfectly natural and desirable state of affairs. However, in rural sections of the nation, there is another and equally important situation which is generally overlooked.

That is to work for the improvement in a scientific and orderly manner, of farm production. If, for instance, any region's farm output and farm income could be raised by 20 or 25 per cent, the beneficial effects would be felt by everyone. And this would be of lasting service to the country as a whole, which must face the problem of feeding a swiftly growing population from a fixed land area.

Greatly increased farm production is no impossible ideal—it is as practical as a sack of potatoes. It can be accomplished by maximum use of machinery in farming, coupled with proper land conservation techniques. It has been said, with full accuracy, that the tractor revolutionized farming. That revolution is nowhere near complete—present-day farm equipment makes it possible to mechanize the work of the land as thoroughly as the work of the modern factory.

The future strength of this country will depend very much on the progress in industry. The two go together like the fingers of a hand.

HUSBAND REVOLTS

Over in Birmingham, twenty-five congressmen are being paid by the state. That puts a severe burden on congress, where its own pay is concerned. The obligation is heavy not to mull the treasury and at the same time not to shortchange themselves.

The McCarran bill (Senate 1653) would raise the present salaries of both congressmen and federal judges. MILLION SMITHS ARE BOOKKEEPING PROBLEM

Ever try to find a needle in a haystack? That's about the sort of job the Social Security administration was faced with recently in its rule as bookkeeper of the world's largest insurance system. As explained by L. R. James, manager of the Public Social Security office, the problem involved one John Smith, who neglected to put his social security number on his tax return when he filed his report of self-employment last March. Now the social security people are trying to pick him out from all the other Smiths on their record.

"The trouble is," James said, "that we have 127,315 social security numbers in the name of Smith. The first name, John, doesn't help much either, since there are 19,345 John Smiths to whom social security numbers have been issued."

"This shows clearly," James continued, "that your name alone is not enough to identify you on our records. We need your social security number, too. If you don't have it, we can't give you credit for your earnings."

James pointed out that with over 100 million social security numbers assigned, all the trouble is not restricted to the Smiths. At least 25 family names are so common that the files of the Social Security administration list more than one-fifth million for each.

COFFEE COMPLIMENT TO MARILYN KEELING

Miss Marilyn Keeling, bride-elect of Bobby Ford, was honored with a coffee Friday morning by Mrs. George L. Peyton in her home in Austin.

Mrs. Peyton greeted the guests and presented them to the receiving line composed of Mrs. Clyde Keeling, mother of the bride, Mrs. R. C. Ford, mother of the bridegroom-to-be, and Mrs. O. Y. Blaylock, aunt of the bridegroom-to-be, of Jacksonville.

Red roses were used in the living room, and gladioli and daisies were used in arrangements throughout the house.

The dining table was covered with an Italian cutwork cloth and was set with a unique ship made of blue and white mums. The bow was inscribed with the letters "USS Marilyn" and blue satin pennants on each side of the ship contained the inscription "Marilyn-Bobby." A novel arrangement of white mums and firecracker replicas was used on the credenza.

Mrs. Peyton presented Miss Keeling with a piece of her chosen silverware, Harriet Tribune.
