THE WHOLE HOG.

First, we now have 63 million people employed in the United States. Only six and a fraction million of these are employed in agriculture. Roughly, one out of every ten people who is employed in agriculture. (There are the latest figures from Washington just out).

Politically, therefore, there are six votes for producers of farm products and fifty-seven votes for non-producers who are consumers of farm products. While the farm vote is a substantial vote in some states, the fact remains that nationwide the farm vote is ineffective.

Second, the farm vote is badly split in every election between the Republicans and Democrats. This makes the farm vote ineffective because it largely neutralizes itself between the Republican and Democrat.

Third, the farmers are divided into groups according to their production. The cotton farmer is primarily interested in getting a living price for cotton. If the cotton farmer needs to buy corn, hay and meat, he will fuss about the price of corn, hay and meat just about as much as the city dweller.

The wheat farmer is primarily interested in getting a living price for wheat. If the wheat farmer needs to buy corn, hay and meat, he will fuss about the price of corn, hay and meat just about as much as the city dweller.

The citrus growers are primarily concerned about getting a living price for citrus fruits, but complain bitterly about the price of milk, bread and meat.

The cattle grower is primarily interested in getting a living price for cattle, but thinks the price of grass seed, feed, milk and other things that he buys is too high.

The farmer, being divided into these many groups and apparently incapable of concert of action, falls easy prey to those who farm the farmer—Tom Linder in Georgia Farmer.

DUAL PERSONALITY.

By Aline Michaelis.
How strange a thing it is to be a dual personality!

Always uncertain and unsure. If he desire or just endure. Since he can never truly say. His morning mood will last the day. And yet, to pay for this crude life. He lives more fully than the rest. With understanding deep and wide. Truth's aspect viewed from every side.

The term "dual" in measuring the height of a horse, is four inches.

BIGGEST BITE.

What takes the biggest bite out of your day's pay? The answer is taxes, direct and indirect, according to a novel chart issued by the Tax Foundation.

The Foundation took for its example a wage earner working eight hours a day and with an income of $4,000 a year, all of which he spends. Then it figured out just how much of his working time is needed to meet each category of expense.

The tax burden, it found, accounted for two hours and 34 minutes of each day's gainful work—far more than for food, housing, clothing, recreation, or any other item.

We all kick at the high cost of living. It would make more sense if we kicked at the high cost of government and demanded that something be done about it.

I wish to be a man among men, and no longer a dreamer among shadows. Hereafter be mine a life of action and reality. I will work in my own sphere, nor wish it other than this. This alone is health and happiness—Longfellow.
