[uncertain] for Breas Dey at the State Fair of Texan

For ms long as anyone could [remember—back] [uncertain] 60 years [ago—] [uncertain] William Weston Aiken, publisher of the Crockett Courier, was always [firat] [uncertain] in line. At 10 a m. Uncle Billy arrived. He was all apologies. It seamed doings" tn the big city kept him up. First of all, the [K0-year-old] [uncertain] news-Peperman explained, some friends over at the Haker Hotel invited him to a dinner ef Sigma Delta Chi, [profesaiona! journaliam nocity,] [uncertain] There he was initiated as one of the oldest members in the [seuthweat] [uncertain] Then, after he had gotten [through] [uncertain] talking with friend and was ready for bed, the din of a big [foothell!] [uncertain] crowd kept him awake ft Usually I rest up here at the fair because I cunt do it back gt the [uncertain] he said with s wink.

Reminiscences of press days gone post at the State Fair begun to fly thick and fast when Uncle Billy" and bis friends cot together. Leroy M. Anderson, 76-year-old publisher of the Denison Preas, recalled that the newspapermen beck a half-century ago used to make the Camp Street [Theater"] [uncertain] their hang-out ground fair-time, There want anything much except a [ecaticring] [uncertain] of [tenta] [uncertain] and some) mud holes here then." Mr.

Anderson said. [Shifting] [uncertain] his own handful of [press. eckets] [uncertain] to the State Fair attractions, 78-year-old Editor Levi A. Dunlap of the Meridian Tribune said that it: [mever] [uncertain] would have taken such bunch as this" years ago. He said that the trouble now with i the fair was that his feet gave out) before he could do all the things available
